What did you like about this course and how it was taught?

(Text/Memo)

- I appreciated the in-depth comments on the journals. This helped me understand my writing better.
- i liked the teacher a lot.
- I liked how, even though it was an online class, the professor still recorded lectures, which I enjoyed.
- That although this was an online course the professor really does try to make you feel like one big connected class and tries her hardest to make everyone participate meaningfully.
- the information was good but preferred if taught in person
- I enjoyed learning at my own pace, but also being able to have a long amount to submit in assignments. I also enjoyed how interesting the material has been so far, and the lectures.
- I enjoyed the engagement with the material, the workload itself was not overbearing, and I felt like I was given space to give my thoughts.
- There was a lot of partition aspects of the course so even though it was online it almost felt like an in person course.
- The feedback was great and helped me better my writing
- How approachable the professor was and she gave great feedback
- It was an online course so it was not necessarily my favorite as far as teaching goes, however, Marilyn was a good teacher given the circumstances. She gave plenty of information to students on assignment and offered constructive feedback for essays. She also did a good job not appearing biased and really allowing students to come to their own beliefs given the information.

(Text/Memo)

- nothing!
- I wish the professor commented in the discussion board more. In my experience with online classes, I engage with the material much more when the professor participates and mediates the discussion boards alongside student responses.
- Nothing I enjoyed everything
- in person course
- nothing
- I know that it can't be in person because that's just how it is, but I'd love a way for there to be more active conversation with classmates, I think it's hard sometimes to communicate with discussion boards, so any in person elements would be great.

(Text/Memo)

- I liked that this course encouraged us to communicate with each other and provided a wide range of material for learning.
- Prof. Piety did a good job of having interesting content and engaging with students while online. I liked the class and it gave me a greater understanding of both Judaism and Christianity. I highly recommend Prof. Piety.
- I enjoyed having videos to watch to explain some of the concepts. It helped me to get a fuller understanding, especially things like the Bart Ehrman lectures and the Frontline videos.
- Though an asynchronous class is hard for me, I appreciate the bluntness and clarity with which this course was taught. There was very little room for surprise when it came to grading. I liked how challenging this class was. Each week I actually felt like I wanted to dive deeper into the subject and formulate better writing/connections. I know immediately that I've learned and retained a good bit of what we went over.

(Text/Memo)

- I didn't like how each week's assignments became hidden after the week was over. It made it hard to view feedback on my work, and I couldn't go back and see what people wrote in response to my discussion board. I have had professors who just lock the discussion board after the due date has passed, and we can still see what people wrote. I also feel like there wasn't really an end goal for the course until the final exam paper outline was released. There was a pre-test to see what we knew, but it didn't provide that clear progression structure. Our professor expressed her frustration with online courses, however I enjoyed the format because it meant I could learn in the class while also working a job, instead of trying to fit it into my required courses during the other three quarters.
- Move to in-person format.
- There was a bit of confusion regarding the journals at first. I think it's confusing to reflect on the course concepts that you learned and how it made you think when you are writing to a general reader, but by the end of the class I understood the structure better.
- Though I do think there was very little room for surprise, there were a few vague instructions. In terms of our journal entries, the writing guidelines provided at the beginning of the course + what was written in the syllabus didn't exactly align with the instructors expectation. For example, the writing guidelines pertain to an argument-style paper, and while the syllabus does say that argumentative writing wouldn't occur often in class, it was very confusing to be told to use an argumentative approach when that is not what was desired. I will say, after the grading of journal 1, I had a much clearer understanding of what was sought in the journals.
